1. In April 1952, numerous low wooden buildings were erected in the large area around the internee camp in Warsaw-Sluzewiec. [redacted] believed that a large military installation was under construction there. The installation was named Kurea.
2. Two sheds, each about 150 meters long, with ramps for vehicles and spur tracks were seen at the site. One was used as a storehouse for all kinds of food, textiles and tools needed in the camp and the Mokotow Prison, while the other was said by [redacted] to be an armed forces depot and to contain similar items.
3. Building No 204, located in the north section of the center of the town at the intersection of Długa and Bohaterska Streets, consisted of three four-story buildings, two of which were semi-finished in late May 1951. [redacted] that the installation was designated as Police School. This designation was also frequently used by workmen there. The building was often inspected by militia officers and civilians.
4. Prior to December 1951, a large new building for the Ministry of Security was designated No 293 and No 297 and was located at the intersection of Krasickiego and Wazyka as an annex to a building which already existed. It was designated as Ministerstwa Bezpieczenstwa. UB and KBW officers worked in the old building.
